year of production

genre

Formats, Entertainment, Gameshows, People & Society

The Powerwall is a new form of political debate, structured around game show rules, to help everyone find answers to important questions in a society that's experienced major changes over the past few years. 6 major party representatives face the question of 100 young voters, gathered in the Powerwall. Over the course of 3 rounds, the political guests have to push a button in order to answer questions on education, environment, health or housing, and their speeches are timed. The Powerwall then gives a "yes" or "no" feedback to a simple question: "Did the politician's answer convince you? ".

The results are immediately displayed and the politicians get 2 more rounds to improve their results: a duel and a battle. Viewers can also participate. By combining information, interactivity and a touch of entertainment, the aim of this unique programme is to bring back a sense of trust to this Powerwall and beyond, the viewers at home. First broadcast in 2019. A new one-off was aired very successfully on May 15, in prime time on RTBF: 21.4%, #1 show that evening, beating even TF1 (at 20.15-22.05).

In this show inspired by the codes of Digital Medias and Adventure Games, eight young people, aged 16 to 30, are catapulted into a unique European adventure. Armed with a simple ticket and guided by a mysterious dynamic QR code, they set off to discover eight destinations across Europe.

Each episode follows their trip, immersed in the political and social realities of a country. Along their journey, they meet passionate activists, experts, and engaged citizens. Together, they discuss relevant societal issues such as LGBT rights, women's rights, education, new technologies, and the environment.

The young participants don't know anything about where they go or who they meet, that's part of this unique experience. They must also take on challenges and solve puzzles to progress in their adventure. At the end the episodes, the young participants, enriched by this unforgettable human experience, submit a legislative proposal.

Get your ticket ready; you're embarking on a journey that will not only change the lives of our participants but also shift the perception of Europe for an entire generation.

A wedding dress is something that we only wear once. What a waste... That's why in this new show, three future brides choose to say «I do» in a family dress, a precious legacy that transcends generations.

Each dress we meet has a history and a whole family attached to it. And of course, there are a lot of memories and emotions they will have to let go of. Because for this dress to become their dream gown, our bride will ask for the help of our two upcycling experts: a precise and meticulous tailor, and a creative and daring stylist.

Their task isn't easy. They have to face technical challenges with dresses that may be a century old and encounter bridal visions that seem impossible. Sometimes, they will even need the help of specialists to remove stains or find an antique fabric. Above all, they navigate families who have their say in every step of the dress's transformation. Because, after all, this dress belongs to the entire family! At times they are united; at others, emotion and history shape the course of transformations...

Between drama, love, nostalgia, clashes, and pride, welcome to a show that takes you on a journey through generations. Because a wedding dress is not just a dress. It's the symbol of a transformation. From a daughter to a wife.

Politics in a Cube is an intense and innovative political debate show that revolutionizes the way we perceive political exchanges. In a glass cube set up in a public square, two political figures face off in an unprecedented duel. In this confined, empty, and audience-free space, the political figures confront their viewpoints on crucial topics such as employment, energy, and purchasing power. No more frills, welcome to the raw, clear, and transparent. This symbolic setting underscores the necessity of transparency in politics, where every gesture and every word are exposed to everyone's view.

This innovative 26-minute format features face-to-face encounters between political heavyweights and offers viewers a unique opportunity to better understand the proposals of different political factions. With interactive elements such as a buzzer to manage time, revealing gift exchanges, provocative blank cards, and mirror questions that prompt introspection, Politics in a Cube turns each confrontation into a true political spectacle, with transparency and truth at its core for the public.

The Yurt is a new form of ecological reality TV, structured around challenges and dilemmas to help everyone find answers to crucial environmental questions in a society facing a climate emergency. Three celebrities face the challenges of sustainable living in a fully equipped yurt, far from their usual comforts. Sweet street

WATCH NOW

Each episode tells the story of a street from the original perspective of the lives of its residents. Every chosen street evokes a quest for something that is an essential part of being human: Love, Peace or even Paradise.

The name of the street serves as a pretext for going off to discover people and their lives. The chosen topic sets the stage for the stories, both literally and figuratively, and serves as a common thread between each story. The strength of the concept lies in the storytelling around a traveling analysis couch. The story is built from a succession of intimate and surprising encounters with its shopkeepers and its street dwellers, voiced by the narrator as the common thread which weaves and intertwines the moments from the lives of six to eight protagonists, allowing them to reverberate and resonate with the very fabric of life.

The voice forges the link between each story, shifting from the individual to the collective and has a life-affirming effect on reality.

Two amateur cook friends compete to try to reproduce as faithfully as possible the complex dish of a great chef in a given time.

The twist: a visual and audible alarm triggers events that disturb apprentice cooks:

- Arms pop out of cupboards and hidden hatches in the kitchen to steal/add ingredients or even tear up the recipe
- A power outage causes lights and all electrical appliances to go out, forcing competitors to cook in the dark
- The clock suddenly starts to speed up putting pressure on the candidates
- The two cooks must exchange their chef's work table and continue the recipe from the other
- And a lots of more crazy stuff!

To avoid these pitfalls and limit the damage to their recipe, each candidate must be the first to press a buzzer placed in front of them.

A jury, made up of a host and the chef, comments on the showdown and designates the best cook who wins a prize at the end of the show.

Who will manage to finish the chef's dish in time by escaping the kitchen traps?

Normal is a web documentary addressing mental health in young adults from a first-person perspective. Through six portraits, the viewer dives into the personal stories of six individuals living with psychological disorders on a daily basis. The series invites us, for the duration of each narrative, to see the world with new eyes. "Normal" takes the viewer beyond ignorance, the unknown, and preconceived ideas associated with these disorders through a narrative that is openly subjective and personal. Through these encounters, the authors question the notion of normality within our society.

Each episode tells the story of a street from the original perspective of the lives of its residents. Every chosen street evokes a quest for something that is an essential part of being human: Love, Peace or even Paradise.

The name of the street serves as a pretext for going off to discover people and their lives. The chosen topic sets the stage for the stories, both literally and figuratively, and serves as a common thread between each story. The strength of the concept lies in the storytelling around a traveling analysis couch. The story is built from a succession of intimate and surprising encounters with its shopkeepers and its street dwellers, voiced by the narrator as the common thread which weaves and intertwines the moments from the lives of six to eight protagonists, allowing them to reverberate and resonate with the very fabric of life.

The voice forges the link between each story, shifting from the individual to the collective and has a life-affirming effect on reality.

This is the story of one of the most famous automotive legends of the century. A myth created by Ferdinand Porsche and wanted by Adolf Hitler that dominated all Grand Prix races between 1934 and 1939. This undisputed domination on the circuits fascinated the world, but it was also an achievement dedicated to serving a criminal ideology. Hitler recovered their technology to use it in his planes, tanks, and other war machines. Of the 19 pre-war Silver Arrows, only four have been found and restored. One of them still runs on circuits worldwide.

This podcast invites children to embark on a journey through forgotten objects tucked away in the corners of the house. Each of these curiosities opens a window to the past, guided by the questions of a little boy: Where does it come from? Who came up with the idea to invent this? What is it used for? What happened? When young Léo's parents go out in the evening, his big sister Julie takes care of him. Together, in the family attic, they take the opportunity to discover buried treasures: a costume, some coins, an old toy, a strange pot... Each find leads to extraordinary stories that shed light on today's realities. Dinosaurs, Pokémon, Halloween, the police... so many subjects with surprising insights!

Interview

Why is humor funny?

Why is humor funny ? is a series of 10 relaxed interviews with personalities for whom humor is central to their work. This question, inspired by a cult sketch from Les Guignols, aims to explore the mechanisms of laughter. Pierre Scheurette, a humorous radio columnist and writer for comedians, avoids the clichéd question "Can we laugh at everything?" Instead, he asks about their inspirations, working methods, and joys in their profession. What is their first comedic memory? Who makes them laugh today? How do they construct a show? Where do they find inspiration? These dialogues feature Alex Vizorek, Guillaume Meurice, Fanny Ruwet, and others, bridging various genres and styles of humor. They encourage listeners to explore live performances and enjoy comedies in cinemas, ultimately highlighting just how funny humor can be.

The future... After a great civil war, humanity has taken refuge in a gigantic holiday station orbiting Earth: Valhalla. Today, it has become a den of mobsters and debauchery. This is where Fr d rik lives: a former cop, now a handyman and alcoholic; and Jessica Tokki: the biggest star of the station. They embark on a quest for a mystical object that would grant strange powers... The Game Boy.

ZERO MORT

Cre

Brussels, December 2059. The Queen of the Belgians announces to the population that over the past year, there have been no "natural" deaths: it is Year Zero Death. And this is thanks to Dr. Stromut and his invention "The Tube," which requires annual visits, known as "tubings," for those over fifty. However, the death of a singer, a youth idol, killed by an elderly person, raises doubts about the safety of the tubing. What is Dr. Stromut really hiding?
